[00:00:00] Frank Gaffney: Welcome to this edition of the webinar series sponsored by BanSharia.com, aimed at exploring and exposing the various aspects of Sharia that are the direct legacy of the Prophet Muhammad, the so-called perfect man under Islamic tradition. It is our purpose today, as in each of these webinars, to expose the true horror of what Muhammad's model is and what its emulation by Muslims who are followers of Sharia mean for particularly freedom-loving people in what is still left of Judeo-Christian civilization.

[00:01:00] Our focus, of course, is on the United States, but we are also mindful of what other nations are being subjected to and are experiencing. I did want to set the stage for this conversation with an extraordinarily powerful short music video that calls to mind the extent to which we are now confronting a very toxic phenomenon, again, in the model of Muhammad. We're calling it Rape Jihad. Let's go to the video.

[00:01:57] "THEY KNEW" music video: I was 12 years old, just a child in the rain. Lost in a northern town where the mills had gone gray. They pulled up in taxis, smiles warm as the lights. Pakistani men with their faith burning bright. Candy and cash, a ride through the night. Whispers of love while they stole out my light. They passed me like meat, like a secret to share.

[00:02:00] While the mosque stood quiet, and no one would care. I begged for my mother, I screamed for the law. But the words in their ears — the color of their skin shut down every fear. Racist was the chain that locked up the truth. While Muslim grooming gangs broke British youth.

They took the names, the cars, the addresses. But community relations became their confession. They trafficked us north, they trafficked us south. Some even to Pakistan, mouths taped, no sound. Impregnated, beaten, drugged till we broke. While the system protected the ones who invoked their profit, their honor, their right to our skin. And called it Islamophobia if we spoke of the sin.

[00:03:00] I sat in that room with Rupert Lowe's team. Six hundred thousand from strangers who cared what it means. Two hours I talked, and the man couldn't breathe. He said he'd never heard evil like this, never seen how one human could break another so clean. They raped me for years while the state closed its eyes. Because naming the faith was —

Young as eleven, sold in the shadows of their multicultural heaven. They feared the backlash more than our screams in the night. Pakistani gangs hunting under streetlight.

[00:04:00] Now the inquiry's closed, but the scars never heal. We're the daughters they buried, so the story stayed real. No more silence. No more looking away. We rise from the wreckage. Pay forever.

[00:05:58] Frank Gaffney: I want to thank the creators of that video, the music, and the film. It's one of the most remarkable of those genre I've ever seen, and I think it speaks powerfully to us of what is happening, not just what has happened, but what is in store as well. We've assembled an extraordinary group of people to speak to this phenomenon of rape jihad.

[00:06:00] People who've experienced the phenomenon, the travesty, the horror of it firsthand in some cases, and certainly through their life experiences. People who are knowledgeable about the history of Islam, which has been characterized by rape from its inception. And we are going to lay bare, I pray, in a way that will be impactful for, yes, America, but also for freedom-loving people everywhere as to why Sharia, which not only condones this, but enables it, will be rejected, will be prohibited, will be banned.

We're gonna hear first from one such woman. Her name is Lara Logan. She is one of the most accomplished journalists of our time. She has had gigs with most of the major networks, including 60 Minutes. She has spoken truth to power, both in that role and as a podcaster these days of the Lara Logan Show. She's just a remarkable human being.

[00:07:00] I'm proud to call her a friend, and I value enormously her willingness to speak to the phenomenon of rape jihad in our time based on a lot of hard experience. Lara Logan, thank you so much for being with us. The floor is yours.

[00:08:03] Lara Logan: Thank you so much for having me, Frank. You know, it shouldn't surprise anyone that rape is used as a weapon of war. We've seen that happen throughout history. But what we're looking at in the United Kingdom is just absolutely breathtaking. I have to tell you, it breaks my heart as you alluded to the fact that I was gang raped and sodomized and beaten by a mob in Egypt when I was on assignment for 60 Minutes in Tahrir Square. I think that was back in around 2011 now. I'm not quite sure. It's hard to keep track of the years as they fly by.

[00:08:00] But what disturbs me about the United Kingdom is that we're talking about three generations of young, mostly white working class girls. I will say not only white. I saw some testimony from some Muslim girls, and what they experienced was equally as horrific. But the vast majority of the victims were white. They were vulnerable because as working class girls, they had no connections. They had no wealth. They had no resources really of their own. They had no influence, and they had no power.

So sometimes when their parents, father went to the police to report this, he was arrested. Or when these girls went to the police, they were taken back. They were delivered back into the hands of their rapists and torturers by the actual police themselves. And then, of course, they were not allowed to talk about this at all. It was covered up at every single level, on the local level all the way up to the top.

[00:09:00] And it started — there was actually an official inquiry before the current inquiry, the Rotherham inquiry, because of what happened in Rotherham. And so what you really saw happening in the UK is that for the most part, nobody wanted to address this. But there were a couple of areas where people stood up, and there were a couple of individuals like Tommy Robinson, who stood up and then ultimately made a movie. And Tommy has been jailed over and over and over again for standing up to this.

But essentially, the United Kingdom just took a knee. I don't understand it. They literally got down on their knees and allowed organized, intentional, systematic gangs of mostly Muslim men, mostly from the country of Pakistan, to intentionally target three generations of young girls.

[00:10:00] And what is so significant with this inquiry, if you haven't seen it, I would really urge your viewers to look up the court transcripts, look up the inquiry. There's a politician in the UK, his name is Rupert Lowe, and he is of the Reform Party. And he has been really doing extraordinary work to bring this to the forefront. Because over and over again, in the British Parliament, they declined to even investigate this. It's just unbelievable. And so the cover-up continued.

And so what Rupert Lowe did was, I don't know that this has ever happened in history. He just held his own inquiry, which ended up with hundreds of thousands of hours of testimony, and that's really what that song was born out of. I think it's meant to be sort of done as the point of view of one of the victims who testified.

[00:11:00] And Frank, I don't know how much your viewers can take, but I will tell you that for years now I've been following this and I've been reading these court transcripts because this is where you really get into the details. And we're talking about 11, 12, 13-year-old girls sometimes, who were kept in a basement, and 20, 30, 40 men a day were brought to gang rape them. This went on for years. They'd pump these girls full of heroin so that they became heroin addicts, and then they would come back.

So that's what they mean about, you know, "You said it was my lifestyle," right, "that I chose this." No, they turned these little girls into addicts, and also they threatened them. They threatened to kill them, kill their families. They used devices to inflate their body parts so that they could be gang raped by more men at the same time, both anally raped and normally raped.

[00:12:00] And there were reports of at least one girl who claimed that her tongue was nailed to a table while she was raped. And then I think the testimony that was the hardest for me was of the young girl who described how her rapist held her down, and he held her head to the ground, and he stared intently into her eyes while they brought in dogs to rape her. Because she said, "He wanted to see the moment that he broke me," and he did.

I don't think anybody has words for people who would collectively and systematically rape girls over time. And there's sort of this horror that these men are capable of this, that they would do it, but then there's also at the same time even a greater horror that we as women, I mean, we have this expectation that the men in our lives — look at Braveheart and look at all these great stories of superheroes and warriors, right? Our men are gonna step forward and do something about this.

[00:13:00] No father is gonna allow their daughter to be raped, no husband, no boyfriend, no brother, no cousin, no uncle. I mean, what is this when the price of your silence is worth more to you than being a decent human being? And what about the mothers? 'Cause I'm a mama bear, right? You're not coming near my child, and if you do God help you.

But then Frank, I think that is the one layer. And it is worth noting that the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Keir Starmer, has been forced to resign over this. He's one of the people that blocked the inquiries, and now it is just unstoppable. The truth is an unstoppable force that none of these people can hold back because there's so many victims, and because everybody, every decent, sane human being, regardless of your politics, is not okay with this.

[00:14:00] And now what we're actually seeing is the price of this leftist policy, this leftist globalist policy, because it's very important that we understand this threat does not just come from Islam alone or from Islamists alone, from political Islamists. I'm not talking about ordinary people, decent people. I know many decent people who are Muslim, having lived many, many years in the US, and I have people that are so close to me, I consider them family. I'm not talking about those people. I'm talking about the political Islamists who don't go to the mosque to worship like my friends do. They go there because it's a forward operating base and a command and control node in a battle of conquest.

But their strongest, most powerful allies, and in some cases their puppet masters, are the leftists and the globalists. Because when you think about it, it's not the Islamists that control the media. It's not the Islamists that control the British Parliament. It's not the Islamists that got Mamdani elected in New York City less than twenty-five years after 9/11. When New Yorkers watched thousands, close to two thousand people overall, but over a thousand people die in their city, people jumping from buildings, and you're gonna put these people in power.

[00:15:00] No, it's the Marxist leftists aligned with the globalists. And the ones that are really in charge, the big dogs of all of this are the open borders nuts. These are the globalists who are pushing and forcing this migration. Yes, the leftists are their foot soldiers, and sometimes much more than that. But it is this alliance of Islamists and leftists and globalists that really are the ones that created the concept of Islamophobia. It was George Soros' Open Society Foundation who really pioneered the modern use of this term.

I don't even know if it really existed before that. But there was an organization called DC Leaks, which was styling itself on WikiLeaks. Of course, you can't find any of this. It's been totally wiped from the internet. But I remember actually being in DC and looking at this and reading these documents that were leaked. The whole thing was laying out what was the definition of Islamophobia, how it was going to be proliferated, who was going to be targeted, the steps for how this should be implemented, and it was the White House, it was academics, it was elected officials, it was members of Congress, it was members of the media. They had a whole plan.

[00:16:00] And what was the point of that? The real intent behind it was to create cover for the Islamists to do what they've been tasked with doing, which is to move into certain neighborhoods, to take over those neighborhoods, and then begin to use the American system in order to get into positions of power in local office, which matches identically what the left does, how they come into conservative areas, and then with all the money from Indivisible funded by George Soros and his network of his NGO industrial complex, they then get their people elected into office who do not represent the people of that place at all. They have momentum for change, which is the blueprint for how you run a revolution. They're well-funded. They steal our tax dollars to finance this stuff, and then they begin to change the laws. So they move from one implementation to another.

[00:17:00] And these people, the cover for their operations has been the leftists and the globalists. And so those are our real enemies because they're all working together.

[00:18:20] Frank Gaffney: Amen. Lara Logan, thank you. We so appreciate your participation. You put a lot on the table, and some of it will be the subject of upcoming webinars. But we so value your insights into what has been taking place in Britain, and we're going to continue to examine that and what is happening elsewhere around the world. God bless you. Keep up your great work.

[00:18:42] Lara Logan: Thank you. If you're in any doubt, if you're one of those people out there who's worried about what people are gonna say about you in public or who's worried about your business or like someone said to me, the number one thing most billionaires fear is losing their business. I'm just gonna say to you, when you let fear rule your life, when you make decisions out of fear, when you make fear and worry and stress and anxiety and all that public humiliation, those are your gods, you get 250,000 girls raped generation after generation. That's what the price is. So you don't have to guess at what is gonna happen in the United States of America if we don't do something about this.

[00:19:00] You don't have to guess because the United Kingdom is not the only country. It's happened in Denmark and Sweden and Germany and all these other countries. This has been for years now, and it's been covered up in all of those countries. There is a reckoning coming, and it's not an accident that they're using rape. It's not just that it's a crime of such power and dominance, it also is a crime that ensures that you hasten the process of muddying the bloodlines so that you don't have any really people who are just British. You now are muddying the waters there. Don't think that isn't a part of the design. It is. There's many layers to this, and all of them are sinister.

[00:20:08] Frank Gaffney: Thank you, Lara, so much. Amy Cyrus, we're going to come to you next. You have also had hard experience with the practice of rape as a young woman, albeit in the form of child marriage. You have spoken powerfully about this on one of the earlier programs that we've done. You've also written, of course, most immediately in your incredibly important new book, The Architecture of Jihad, about what we're up against, and we so appreciate your contributions to this program. Give us your thoughts on what we've just heard as well as what we must anticipate if we are not alive to this danger.

[00:20:53] Anni Cyrus: Thank you, Frank. So let me start here because I always like to take us back to the roots of the problem. In the Quran, there are 15 times, that's one five, 15 times where the Quranic verses refer to what Americans heard of what your right hand possess or your sex slaves. But if you read the actual Arabic word, it literally translates to what you rightfully possess. Rightfully possess. 15 times this phrase is mentioned in the Quran connecting what you are allowed or not allowed to do with your captured female slaves that are not Muslims.

[00:21:00] But then there is zero, I repeat, zero time the word rape itself described or mentioned in the Quran. So let's understand this correctly. Rape does not exist in Islam. The concept isn't there. They don't look at what they're doing as a rape the way we describe it. They look at it as their rightful right to act, to impose on those who are not believers, or in some cases, even those who are believers. When you don't have the definition of the crime, it's not a crime anymore. It's an act for Muslim man.

I think that's important to know because, yes, I agree with some of the points Lara Logan just made. Not all Muslims are rapists. Many Muslims don't even know what I just said. However, within the toolbox, there is no crime as rape. It becomes much easier to act upon because it is not a crime. Just like taking somebody else's life, it's not a crime. Just like blowing yourself up in a public school is not a crime. So rape is not a crime, it's an act that Allah has approved of Muslims to do towards their own wife or a sex slave.

[00:22:00] Now, with that in mind, when you look at people, just an average Muslim man, coming from countries where inside the law of that country, the system also doesn't mention it as a crime. It says, "If the raped woman or girl brings four male witnesses..." By the way, it's another thing, you cannot have female witnesses to your rape. So if someone rape you in the same room as the other victim, the other victim's testimony is disregarded. You have to have four male witnesses to the rape. Otherwise, you have admitted to committing adultery, therefore you, the victim, will be stoned. These are the mindset we're dealing with.

Now, yes, the governments are allowing it. Yes, the governments are kneeling. Yes, the governments are caught, and then some of them are resigning, which I wanna be very clear for the record, I don't think anyone involved with these cases should just be set free with a resignation. They should all stand trial. They were part of this. Resignation is not good enough, but that's just my personal opinion, and I'm not in UK, so I don't play a role on that decision.

[00:23:00] But when we start getting those cases exposed in America, because they're happening in America... I have personally worked with an undercover organization tracking American girl trafficking inside America under leadership of a Pakistani grooming gang. I was their translator. I translated phone calls and messages and letters. It is happening in America. You just haven't heard the report yet. So as we sit here and point fingers at England, don't forget to point finger over here too.

One thing I agree, rape has been used as a weapon during war, and I agree Islam is at war with all of us at all time. However, the rape weaponization doesn't apply to Muslims. Rape is not a weapon for them. Rape is the basic tool for them to break the soul and the spirit of a society, just like Muhammad did with the tribes of all the Jewish tribes he conquered. He turned all of their daughters and wives into slaves or his own wives. This is where they infiltrate your culture. They break the spirit of your culture. They break your pride, and then conquer you through that one of ten steps in my book.

[00:25:00] So let's not look at it as they understand what rape is. Let's not look at it as they do understand it's a crime. Let's treat them as they come from a clueless, inhumane background of a man they follow that preferred any kind of pain inflicted on women based on his own hatred of women, or as some say, he was so afraid of women he decided to break them, chain them, and hold them down. These are the people we deal with. Are they all the same? Absolutely not. However, are we willing to take the risk to see which one are going to be those in the future in our country? 'Cause I'm not.

[00:26:55] Frank Gaffney: Anni, thank you. What a powerful testimony and again, one of hard experience. We're gonna move through a very impressive batting order here.

Gloria Puldu is a freedom fighter from Nigeria who I had the privilege of interviewing for our program Securing America on Real America's Voice earlier today. She has graciously agreed to join us on short notice to bring insights into this rape jihad from the perspective of Nigeria, and specifically how it features in the genocidal attacks by jihadists against the Christian population of her country. She is the president of the Leah Foundation, which she established to honor and help effect the release of Leah Sharibu, an amazing Christian girl who was forcibly taken and remains a prisoner of, I believe Boko Haram. Certainly one who has suffered incredibly at the hands of rape jihadists amongst her captors, and who has done so simply because she refused to give up her Christian faith.

[00:27:00] Gloria, thank you. Dr. Puldu, you are a force of nature, and we're so appreciative of your contributing to this program at this point. Over to you.

[00:28:25] Dr. Gloria Samdi Puldu: Thank you very much, Frank, and so grateful to be on this panel with all these amazing women. And I do want to appreciate the fact that hearing from these two women describing what happens in my country as well, it's very heartbreaking that we have to have this issue all around the world, and we are fighting the same thing.

And for us in Nigeria, we know the story of Leah Sharibu, just like you mentioned. She is going through what she is going through the past eight years in the hands of Islamist terrorists who have abducted her just for refusing to denounce her Christian faith. And we have thousands of Leahs in captivity, also in the hands of Islamists that have vowed to make Nigeria into an Islamic caliphate just to ensure that they get the whole of Africa. So they are starting with a population of over 200 million people and over 100 million Christians in Nigeria. And so they are bent on doing that.

[00:29:00] And they go about destroying villages and communities, most especially Christian communities, killing the men and then abducting the women and forcefully raping them, converting them, and also making them become sex slaves, as well as continue to give birth so that they can take these children and incorporate them into and enforce them into the jihadist army.

And so it is terrible to hear what is happening in Nigeria happening in UK. It is terrible to hear what is happening in Nigeria happening in the United States, because we are a Third World country, and sometimes we say, "Okay, we have not developed to this level, and that is why these Islamist terrorists can establish their Islamic agenda in raping communities like that." It is horrible.

We have had the case of apostasy and blasphemy laws that are incorporated into our secular constitution, and that is one thing that we are fighting for, to get that removed, because it is a secular nation, so why should we have such laws embedded? And then a young girl, Deborah Emmanuel Samuel, from her college in the university, was stoned to death because of blaspheming.

[00:30:00] And then apart from that, you have a lot of girls from communities, Christian communities, that are stolen from their families, and they are taken forcefully by Islamists into the communities, and they are forced to be raped over and over, and their parents cannot even go to demand. And then you don't have a justice system that works that when you even go to report that, that your daughters will be given back to you.

So it's a shame to the world entirely that what will be happening in the Third World that we are struggling to ask for such atrocities to be stopped in Africa, in Third World countries, happening in First World, it's a shame. And the entire world should be ashamed of allowing such horrific and terrible barbaric way of civilization to continue to happen.

So for me, listening to Lara and listening to Anni, it just breaks my heart that where we are even coming to demand for help you allow such a thing to happen in your communities? It is sad. It is sad, and they should be stopped.

[00:32:05] Frank Gaffney: Thank you so much, Gloria. We're gonna turn next to a man who has been doing a remarkable job of trying to capture such horrors and to present them in the words of those who are, if not actually perpetrators, certainly condoning and enabling those crimes against women, and specifically in most cases, girls, as Sharia scholars, as imams, as leaders of Sharia-adherent communities.

His name is George Rasley. He is a man of many parts, a very accomplished public policy practitioner in the Congress and in the executive branch in various stages of his career. He has also worked on some 300 political campaigns and these days is the managing editor of a marvelous online resource, Conservative HQ. We're always delighted to have him. And George, I understand you have brought some evidence of what we're talking about here that you have been compiling, curating, and trying to make accessible to the rest of us. Welcome, sir. Over to you.

[00:33:25] George Rasley, Esq.: Thank you, Frank. I'm honored to be with this panel and these brave women. Humiliation of non-Muslims is a core principle of Islam. It's essential to understand that as a non-Muslim, if you're living in a Muslim-majority country as a dhimmi, that you live under humiliation as it's called. Rape is an essential part of that humiliation process, but it isn't, as others have pointed out, only deployed against non-Muslims, although I would have to say that in a Muslim-majority society, probably the only living being lower than a non-Muslim woman in the hierarchy is probably a dog.

[00:33:00] Sharia courts have actually ordered the rape of women as part of the punishment meted out when a Muslim man rapes a Muslim woman. This is in Pakistan, where they have Sharia courts as part of the everyday system of laws in that country. The victim's brother was allowed, in fact ordered, to rape the accused sister. This is how deeply rape is embedded in Muslim culture.

And finally, a clip where the imam explains how the Quran allows rape and sex slavery.

[00:34:57] Media clip, female interviewer: Islam's view on concubines.

[00:35:00] Media Clip, Islamic Scholar: A Muslim man can have up to four wives at once. And in addition to the four wives, he can have an unlimited number of concubines, which refer to women who are basically have slave status. When they are owned by her master, a woman owned by her master has to freely give herself to the master. The master has the right to have sexual relations with her as though she were one of his wives.

[00:35:31] Media clip, female interviewer: And is there, how does, does consent play into this at all?

[00:35:35] Media Clip, Islamic Scholar: The understanding is that by virtue of the fact that she's owned, she does not have the right to consent or to withhold herself from her master. The master has the full right over her, and her consent does not play anything in this relationship.

[00:35:53] George Rasley, Esq.: So there you have it. And this is not something that's happening in ancient history, as been pointed out. This is happening right now today. And so I will defer the rest of any time I might have to the rest of the panel.

[00:36:08] Frank Gaffney: Sonja Dahlmans is a scholar of Islam, now pursuing her doctoral degree, having gotten a master's in specifically the horrors of what Sharia inflicts upon women and children. She's based in the Netherlands. She has an extraordinary command of both the historical underpinnings of this kind of conduct and of its implications for particularly Western societies like hers and of course like ours as well.

Sonja, thank you very much for finding some time to give us your thoughts on this subject of rape jihad, both historically and today.

[00:36:58] Sonja Dahlmans: Thank you, Frank. Just a little correction. My focus actually is on what Dr. Puldu has been speaking about. So for my doctoral thesis, my main focus is Nigeria, Syria, and Pakistan. That is what I focus on. And as I've mentioned in some of the other seminars we did last week and the week before, this is not something — when you hear Dr. Puldu speak, and I want the audience to get this — this is not something for people, a problem only for Nigeria.

[00:37:00] I have been throughout the past twelve years trying to tell people to explain how these things that are happening there should be and are a concern of us. Not just because of our Christian love for our fellow brothers and sisters, our siblings in Christ, but also because of, as we have seen, Lara has mentioned it, the connection with Pakistan and what is happening in Britain. And that is a connection that I've made in articles already four, five years ago.

Just a quick idea to demonstrate what has been happening in the UK and that clip, that powerful clip that you started this seminar with. "Did they know?" These are the reports.

[00:38:21] Frank Gaffney: Yeah?

[00:38:22] Sonja Dahlmans: This is the Jay report Lara was referring to. This is all the reports on Telford, Birmingham, everything. Get the no, yes. It is as simple as that. I've read all these reports, analyzed them, and there are a few things that I want to highlight. First of all, as I've mentioned, these things, as Dr. Puldu was rightly so mentioning, are happening in other countries, as we have been discussing the past few weeks.

This is what happened in the UK is something that has connections with Pakistan. There's two things. First of all, it is important to realize it is people from Pakistan. I don't like in these reports that I'm that I've just shown you, I don't like it when people say Asian, 'cause that is such a fake terminology. It doesn't do us any good to use that. By the way, it also implies that other Asian men like Chinese or Japanese or Korean or whoever are doing this, but the majority are Pakistanis, British Pakistani men.

[00:39:00] Why it is important is that because Pakistan itself, regardless of religion, of perpetrator and victim, we get to that in a second, but Pakistan itself has a huge problem with child abuse, and you can see that from the annual report by an organization that publishes these reports called Cruel Numbers. I've been following them for the past 10 years, and Frank, the numbers are increasing every year. So child rape in Pakistan, huge problem, also in Pakistani madrassas, so that is Quran schools.

And I'm sorry, but some of the victims there are infants, infant boys. That is what we're talking about. So that is one part of the problem.

Second, if we go to Pakistan and we connect that with the United Kingdom, is the issue of impunity, because in Pakistan it happens a lot to Hindu and Christian and Sikh girls that are being abducted, raped, forced to marry, forced to convert to Islam, just as Dr. Puldu was sharing with us from Nigeria. Same thing happens in Pakistan. The United Nations just two weeks ago actually published a letter of concern about both countries, Pakistan and Nigeria.

[00:40:00] What is important there is that because these people are marginalized, so religious minorities under Islam are marginalized communities both in Nigeria and Pakistan, is that these perpetrators are often, they have impunity. They can do whatever they want, and just the other day I heard from a 12-year-old girl that was imprisoned after being raped. We have girls in Pakistan that are in prison, for example, because they escape, and that means that they now are apostates because they have forcibly converted them to Islam. We're talking about a 14-year-old girl.

Going to the UK with that in our mind, we also know from the report, but also from the by Rupert Lowe MP, but also from the reports, the earlier reports, that there are cases of conversion and that there are cases of marriages, Sharia marriages, of these victims. It is happening in the UK as well. We don't have statistics, we don't know how many, but we do know from some of the testimonies that that is happening.

[00:41:00] And again, just like in Pakistan, believe it or not, in the United Kingdom, this impunity where actually all should be equal to the law in the United Kingdom, these people were not legally prosecuted. So that is very much connected and that is, in my view, one of the biggest mistakes the UK government and its representing authorities made.

And then this whole thing with the inquiry Rupert Lowe and his team just did, they had to. The government had to come with something, then they finally said that they were also doing their own inquiry. And then what they tried to do was to enlarge the definition of what happened, child sexual exploitation, to such an extent that it didn't specify anymore on what actually happened with these grooming gangs. Victims then decided that they didn't want to be part of this inquiry anymore, and I don't know where this inquiry, the official one by the government, where that is right now.

[00:42:00] From the past, though, under the one of the previous prime minister, Rishi Sunak, we do know that he said no stone would be unturned. But when there was a report under the Minister Jarvis, they said that publication was not in the interest of the British public. And only because the British public was so enraged and they started getting all sorts of people's autographs to demand that it would be published, it finally was published.

But this report is often used to prove that there is no majority, but actually the report doesn't say that there is no majority of Pakistani Muslim men. It says we don't have the data. Which is also what the Casey report that was published about a year ago by Baroness Casey, she also says we don't have the data because that was never written down. However, did she conclude, we do know there is an over-representation of these Pakistani Muslim men. We know that because we can simply see after the people started to get convicted, we see who these people are exactly, the perpetrators.

[00:44:00] And then we had the mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, denying in London City Council, denying that he even knew what grooming gangs were. And after that, four, five months after that, the London Police, Metropolitan Police, said that they were investigating more than 1,000 cases. That is the authorities.

[00:45:04] Frank Gaffney: But Sonja, this is such important texture for this larger study, and I appreciate that Nigeria is a special focus of your efforts as well as Syria and Pakistan. These are hotbeds of the jihad, obviously. I'm delighted to say that we have with us yet another marvelous freedom fighter on behalf of women and children in particular.

Her name is Elizabeth Yore. She is an attorney by training, but has spent most of her professional life working on behalf of the victims of various kinds of inhumane treatment, trafficking and sexual exploitation and the like, both in government in her native state of Illinois and at the federal level, and of course in the private sector, in connection with her own organization she calls Yore Children, Y-O-R-E, her last name. A wonderful double entendre. We are so pleased, Liz, that you've been able to join us. We've been trying to get you on one of these webinars for some time, and you're extraordinarily busy with your work. So thank you for finding time and your insights into how this ties into more generally the rape jihad that is into the Sharia supremacist agenda and the accommodation inside this country to the extent you have insights into that, as has been alluded to by others, would be very, very helpful indeed. Over to you, ma'am.

[00:46:45] Elizabeth Yore, Esq.: Well, thank you, Frank, and thanks to the esteemed panel who have done extraordinary work in this area, and I know will continue to carry the banner. You know, James Michener said that an age becomes dark not because the lights go out, but because nobody notices it, and I think that's what we're talking about in England. And we are in the dark ages, not only in England, but also I think around the world. And it is a barbaric cautionary tale for America to watch what's going on in England for the last thirty to fifty years, and actually I think it's a five-alarm fire. And I'm happy to see that American media is covering the rape inquiry report as opposed to apparently the mainstream media in England is not giving it much attention.

But frankly, I thought I had seen everything in my thirty-five-year legal career in child protection, but these stories are from the depths of hell. And I can only urge Americans to read this report and educate yourself about the dangers of Islam, Sharia, this jihad against women, girls, boys.

Look, England needs 1,000 Tommy Robinsons, 1,000 Katie Hopkins and Rupert Lowes and Sami Woodhouse and even then to be able to topple and root out this endemic corruption, barbarism, wokeism, all that has come together in this tragedy of immense proportion. I mean, we are looking at literally the Dark Ages of England, and I don't really know if training can fix the problem. Because you cannot give a person a new heart, and this was a failure to care on every single level of society and institutional neglect.

[00:48:00] And you know, as these victims all related, these violent perpetrators were motivated and driven by racial ideology to commit jihad rape. And not only the perpetrators, but the families were in full support of it, and generations of Britain's girls have been subject to this, and this has succeeded almost without any intervention until now. And what really struck me, and it should strike the feminists in America and around the world, how these precious, innocent, vulnerable victims were mocked, demeaned, dehumanized by these rape jihadists.

And look, there is no fixing this crisis except with a sustained draconian change at every level of British society. And I would add that the world needs to turn its attention to England and demand that England not just have another report, not do a fix here and there. Britain needs a civilizational reckoning, of frankly divine intervention. And unless and until everyone responsible is brought to heel, nothing is going to change.

[00:50:00] And unlike other scandals, the fact that literally every single institution that was created to protect children, that was created to be a watchdog to protect the public, they all failed these children. The monarchy, the media, the judiciary. There must be a full-throated, not only an apology, but a solemn vow that this will never happen again, and that until every single perpetrator is either imprisoned or deported, until there is a strict policy, immigration policy, put in place and adhered to nothing's gonna happen.

These clueless and complicit leftists in America, your time is up as well. This grand project of multiculturalism has failed miserably. DEI, woke diversity, inclusivity has been an experiment that has cost children their lives, and it is now dead on arrival. And to me, this needs to be on the world stage, and to look at England as this tragic case that will be replicated in America, is being replicated as we know all over Europe.

[00:52:00] And if we don't stop everything and take a hard look and put in procedures, tough procedures, and insist that those procedures are followed through. What is Britain gonna do about this brutal rampage of this Muslim mafia of marauders and monsters?

What are they gonna do? What is Britain going to do about woke people, including the present pope, I might add, who meet and greet boatloads of Muslim immigrants, you know, soon on the anniversary of the 250th anniversary of America's freedom?

And to me, I've seen it all. I have never ever seen what's gone on with these children. And the fact that police officers, childcare workers, social workers, hospital employees, nurses, doctors have just all turned a blind eye is just... You begin to feel what is needed to restore sanity and a soul to the country of Britain. And does America going to pay attention now. And frankly, Frank, this is what these seminars need to do. This is a wake-up call for America. If anybody is so naive to think that the number one, I suspect it's happening in the United States, maybe not with the complicity of all the institutions in Britain, but soon it will be if we don't intervene and bring the existence of this massacre to the world stage.

[00:54:00] And I'm not sure that Britain has the capacity to do that, but I think and believe in my heart that America has this opportunity to point to Britain and to ourselves as complicit as we are, and to say the world has got to put its foot down, and if we cannot protect our own, then we should just call it a day. So it's gonna take a monumental effort, and it's gotta be sustained over generations. And we cannot take our eye off the ball. This has got to be done. That rape report has got to be in every home in America so that everybody has a sense of that this could happen here, this is happening here, and how do we protect our children?

So I've told you, Frank, I was shaken to my boots. I had been following this crisis for many years, but to see the level of detail and gruesome barbarity in the rape report was really beyond the ken. And I just have to sound the alarm. We have got to maintain a concerted effort to turn this monstrosity around.

[00:55:39] Frank Gaffney: Amen. Liz Yore, thank you. So passionate and so informed is your analysis of this, that it is, I hope, going to be echoed throughout our country in the days to come, and we'll certainly be doing our part to make that happen. As we have generally done with these programs, we've asked our friend and really our sort of co-chairman of this enterprise, Dr. Karen Siegemund of the American Freedom Alliance, to present her own thoughts on the subject of rape jihad, of course, but also to the extent she can sort of help synthesize what we've learned and to further channel the kinds of course correction that is so clearly needed and each of our wonderful presenters have spoken about.

So Karen, you have been also freedom fighting tirelessly for decades, notably as an educator working with children. And we know that your passion on this subject is informed in no small way by that experience. So the term is yours at last, ma'am.

[00:56:51] Dr. Karen Siegemund: Thank you so much. I don't know how to summarize all the foregoing. Everything everybody said was so extraordinary, and from that opening song that captured every element in the most profound and moving way, that needs to be spread far and wide. Everybody who spoke, Laura Logan has been on this issue forever so long, and her own personal horrific experience can only color all this. And her point that rape jihad, rape has always been a means for war. It's always been a weapon of conquest.

But I think in particular under this guise, one of the important points we need to take from this, jumping off of that, Islam seeks global dominance and conquest, which means you're either conquered or needing to be conquered, which means that rape is either your prerogative over conquered peoples, their women, or those soon to be conquered people, the women and the girls. So it's part and parcel of this entire means of effecting global dominance. It is either a weapon to be used or it is a weapon to be used in conquest or evidence of conquest.

[00:57:00] And I think what we're seeing in England and we see it in Germany, we see it in the Netherlands, we've seen it, we're seeing it in France, obviously Nigeria, the evidence of this is all too pervasive. It can also only happen though, as we are part of this discussion, in areas where there is already a major break in civilizational institutions. If a nation is healthy and full of pride of itself, and if the Judeo-Christian values are strong and family is strong, and democratic values are strong, this cannot take a foothold. It can only thrive with the complicity, and I don't even think complicity is strong enough of a word. It can only take place where the left has loosened all the strengths of all these bonds.

Why are they going after the girls? The families are all broken. These institutions are broken. One of the things that when you read the report, yes, the horrors are beyond comprehension, but something that struck me, there was a woman who was supposed to come to the aid of a girl in these reports. The girls go to get help, and those with the charter to protect the most vulnerable of us fail them completely. But one of these Child and Protective Services people said was, and she was told about a girl being forced to live with a number of young Islamic men, "Well, you know, the good part is she's learning to understand other cultures."

[00:59:00] And I thought this is just exactly the point where the UK as a nation, as a sovereign idea, as a culture, has just revealed its complete capitulation. That not only is it okay, but they're praising the circumstances under which this girl is living. So put together everything everyone has said, and Anni of course, going back to the Quranic reasoning for all of this, Dr. Gloria with evidence of what's happening in Nigeria, that one can... Third World countries may not have the same expectations that we do in the first world, and to see that the first world is struggling with this boggles our mind that we are struggling with this, but again, did they know? You bet they knew, as Sonja showed us, and it was part of the song. They knew. The girls knew they knew, and have been failed time and time and time again.

To find that your elected officials, your law and order, your media, your free speech, everyone who is supposed to protect you, is in fact complicit with those seeking to undermine you, that is evidence of conquest. Not only are these girls' lives ruined, their families' lives are ruined, but we've seen fathers are being destroyed, mothers are being destroyed. Media that there's massive blackouts on what we can and cannot say. That kind of complicity and silencing, this all is part and parcel of conquest. It's not as a result of it, it is part of it, it is part of the weapon of it, and it is part of the consequences of it.

[01:01:00] And as all the foregoing have said, where it's happening, wherever it's happening, hopefully it's not too late in the UK, but we need to watch the UK, Nigeria, the Netherlands, Germany, Texas. And make no mistake that our elections here, when the left gets a strong foothold, we know what comes next. Mamdani in himself is the Red-Green alliance. Mamdani himself as a Democrat socialist, as a socialist and a Muslim himself embodies this. But wherever the left gets the strongest foothold, what they are doing is weakening the entire edifice that is these great United States and the free world in order for this conquest to come forward.

So I stand with all the foregoing. We're all freedom fighters. I don't think many of us really thought we would be talking about young girls being raped and the law enforcement being on the side of the rapists. It's shocking that people like Tommy Robinson winds up in prison and the rapists are out walking freely because culture. So Frank, thank you so much for this. It's an honor to be part of this panel. It's an honor to be part of this effort. We need to protect the most vulnerable among us, and we need to protect Western civilization as a whole, because that is what they are coming after.

[01:03:35] Frank Gaffney: We've had a last-minute addition to the program, and I'm gonna ask your indulgence to hear from the Honorable Matt Shea, a man who has served with distinction in the legislature of the state of Washington. He's an Army veteran as well. He has devoted much of his life of late, in addition to his ministry, to trying to teach our countrymen and women about the threats we've been discussing here today. The subset of the larger Sharia threat, but also this phenomenon of rape jihad. And we asked him to take time from a very busy day to share with us a little bit of his perceptions of what we're up against, the context, historical and otherwise, briefly if possible. But also, Matt, what in your training with America's Future, a marvelous group founded by Mary and Michael Flynn, you are telling Americans to ensure they are alive to these dangers in our own country and, as several of our speakers have described, the necessity of resisting it, so we don't find ourselves slip sliding into the submission that these perpetrators of jihad have in mind for us. Over to you, sir.

[01:05:12] Matthew Shea, Esq.: Well, Frank, first of all, I just wanna honor you and just thank you for sounding the alarm years and years and years, and now finally people are awakened and their ears are open to hear and to listen. I think the hardest thing for the Western mind to wrap around is that the perpetrators of the rape of England and what they are planning, the rape of America, they believe they're doing the right thing. They believe morally they are doing the right thing. That is so hard for the Western mind to really grasp, and we can cite all kinds of hadiths in the Quran, but they do what they say they believe.

They believe most women are going to end up in hell. That comes from multiple hadiths, including Bukhari, Volume 1, Book 4, number 184, just to cite one example. They believe that if a woman is not veiled, that she is fair game. They believe that there really are no restrictions, that anything goes when they have a sex slave, and that's what these young girls, as Karen was just talking about, this is what these young girls have been brought into. The Muslim perpetrators of this believe they have an actual slave, and therefore they can do anything to her with two exceptions. One, they cannot have relations with her if she is pregnant, and two, they cannot have relations with her while she's on her menstrual cycle.

[01:06:00] And that's why we heard in that horrific document, but much necessary document, that rape gang inquiry report, that they quite literally would be raping a woman in every hole all at the same time. And as horrific as that is for me to say as a pastor, the American mind needs to wake up to this reality that, again, they believe they are doing the right thing. And the Quran is very clear that the veil is supposed to cover a woman's sexuality from any man that might want to have relations with her. So again, all women are fair game. That's why they believed it was morally right to do what they did to Lara Logan in Tahrir Square in Egypt. That's why they believed it was right to do it to the English girls that have been victimized.

So with that said, there is also the moral imprimatur that having sex with a female slave is actually morally good and draws them closer to Allah. There was a testimony of one of the Yazidi victims of ISIS talking about how one of the men said that this drew him closer to Allah every time that he raped her, and he would say that to her as he was raping her. This, again, for the Western mind is very difficult to grasp. But to simplify it from a Christian perspective and as a pastor, there is a spirit behind this, and there is a spirit behind this not just with the jihadis, but also with the communists. That is why you see the left also apologizing for groups like NAMBLA, the North American Man Boy Love Association, and other organizations that seek to lower the age of consent, because this is a spirit. And if we don't recognize that, I think we are actually doomed to failure.

But there is a solution, and that is raising the awareness right now, combating this everywhere we see it, including at the local level. And I do wanna be very clear on this. There are already areas, specifically in Texas, that are adjudicating Sharia. These are areas that have Sharia courts set up. And for many Americans are like, "How can that be possible even in Texas?" It is happening. And one of the interesting parts about it is law enforcement largely has been clueless about this. If you ask a sheriff in this Muslim area where this Islamic center is, "Do you get any calls out of that area?" And the sheriff say, "No, it's great. It's peaceful." And if you inform that sheriff that the reason is because they're already adjudicating Sharia there, they already have courts set up, that's why you're not getting any calls, most of them are absolutely flabbergasted.

[01:09:00] So again, I believe we're coming to a decision point for Western civilization, and do we want America to follow in the footsteps of Britain, being raped and pillaged in the cause of Islam and the cause of Sharia? And do we want to stand by while that happens, or are we going to make the decision that our country is founded on Judeo-Christian values and principles, it is founded on the Constitution of the United States, and Sharia has no place here in the US?

[01:10:10] Frank Gaffney: Matt Shea, thank you. I wanna just do a quick round robin because we're about at the end of our time, but each of you has made such important points. And I think what you just introduced, Matt, which is really an important evolution of this conversation, is it's not just the girls, or in some cases the women, who are being raped and sexually abused and all the other horrors that we've been exposed to here. It's our countries, it's our societies, it's our culture that are being raped as well. And as each of you have said in your own way, that's by design. That's not a coincidence or an accident. It is what this is all about.

And Karen Siegemund, I so appreciate the point you've made really in each of these briefings, is it's about conquest. It's about achieving the triumph over these non-Muslim societies, in this case, in a particularly brutal way, vectored against some of the most powerless members of that society. I'd like each of you just to take another minute or two, if you would, to just look forward and both to what we must do now, again, picking up on Matt's point that this situation is metastasizing inside our country. Those — you didn't quite put it this way, Matt, but I think what was implicit is those Sharia courts are enforcing Sharia on women who may come as — I'm sorry, Anni Cyrus has had to go. But as she said, I think in our first of these webinars, when she went to an imam seeking protection from the husband who married her at thirteen who was beating her and raping her, obviously, she was told by him, his adjudication was, "Go back and do as he asks." This is something that needs to be directly confronted.

Yes, we are about educating our people that this is happening, yes, here in the United States. But give us, if you would, each of you, just what you want people particularly to take away from this conversation in terms of what we must do to ensure the girls of America, women more generally, the people, the Constitution, the culture, the nation are not raped by Sharia supremacists. If we may maybe start with you, Liz.

[01:13:13] Elizabeth Yore, Esq.: I think a whole of government resources needs to apply deportations, denaturalizations countrywide. Every state should have ban Sharia law. There should be any Sharia court that has been set up in secret or not, anybody who's involved in it should be immediately deported. I think there needs to be education in the schools with respect to this vile ideology. And interestingly, it's at the top level as well as at the local level. We've seen the work done in Texas, the people doing battles in the school boards and in the community organizations. It's a top to bottom approach, but it has to be every single imaginable resource. Yes, pass laws, that's helpful. But unless we're educating people about the importance of the law as well as the importance of the policies to protect Americans, our immigration law, our refugee laws need first and foremost to protect our citizens, and that needs to be underscored, and I think it's a whole of government approach, and education is the first piece.

And as they have been able to inflict the culture with woke ideology, it's our responsibility to counteract and impose a real-life education process for children, for families, to understand this rape jihad. And finally, this is a matter for the church. The churches have got to create strong families, because a strong family, a mother and father, can protect children. And that's the important cell of society that has worked for centuries.

[01:15:23] Frank Gaffney: Those — and it's no accident that it's being taken apart.

[01:15:26] Elizabeth Yore, Esq.: Right. Exactly.

[01:15:28] Frank Gaffney: Thank you, Liz, very much. Sonja, your thoughts on what we do about this.

[01:15:34] Sonja Dahlmans: Thank you, Liz, for saying that it is a matter for the church, and I would even take that a step further. We need to start reading and analyzing again what our church fathers wrote. Because they have dealt with this, with child abuse, child prostitution, everything. My master's thesis in theology is on the subject. I'd be happy to share that. But this is what they knew, and they dealt with it. And one of the things that is really important is that Christianity is the answer because only the church has a theology of vulnerability. Every other system, be that Islam, communism, whatever, every other system takes advantage of the weak, of the vulnerable. And only the Christian Church has an answer to that. When you say that we need to step up, Frank, we need to realize, and I'm gonna say it, and people may think I'm crazy, but we are back in Rome. That is the issue. We are back. We are so back in Rome, and the church fathers laid down the foundation for that, and we need to go back to what they wrote. I think that is my key point.

[01:16:56] Frank Gaffney: Fascinating. And particularly tying into that point about the role of the church of corrective action here.

[01:17:02] Frank Gaffney: George Rasley, your thoughts, sir.

[01:17:05] George Rasley, Esq.: I think that the crucial thing that we must do as Americans is to build a coalition of the informed, and that starts with informing women as to the great threat to their independence and their agency that Islam represents. We see in the Democratic Party, and I hate to be political about this, but we see the leading women of the Democratic Party, New Jersey Governor Mikie Sherrill, Lieutenant Governor of Minnesota Peggy Flanagan, even Nancy Pelosi, the former Speaker of the House, sort of cosplaying as Muslims, going around in hijabs, cozying up to Islamists. And many women in this country take their cues from them and think, "Oh, this isn't a threat to me. In fact, I'm a good person. Maybe I'm a Muslim at heart." And they have no clue that what Islam really means for women. And so part of the reason that I prepared this longer program was to inform women exactly what Islam means for them. And we certainly need to make that a part of our educational efforts and our political organizing efforts to ban Sharia going forward.

[01:18:36] Frank Gaffney: It follows from that, of course, that as I think several of you have sort of alluded to at least, where are the feminists in all of this? It was a very important theme of our program about women, Sharia versus women, a few of these ago, but it's relevant to this particular topic as well. George, thank you. Karen Siegemund, you have sort of enunciated some thoughts about what we must do more generally, but specifically on the question of as a thought leader in our country, how we can enlist women who have so much on the line and the children for whom they care, obviously.

[01:19:21] Dr. Karen Siegemund: You know, it's funny when you ask this question, what would we do? My first thought, I went straight to the church. So it's fascinating to me that I'm in good company here. It is the church. The church Judeo-Christian values are what have always supported the children, and to watch this collapse under these attacks is what's so horrifying. I also think DEI as a massive influence, influential thrust into our communities, our societies, has absolutely got to be taken apart, dismantled, sown under with salt. Diversity is not our strength. What is our strength are these founding values, Judeo-Christian, and also the founding values of this country. All men are created equal. Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

And I think also think listening to this conversation, the way to get the country back is to hark back to our founding principles. Yes, the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, but again, we cannot forget that those were founded on biblical principles. So you can't really do one without the other. We at one time had civilizational confidence against communism, just for example. We did not let people in who were who believed in communism and now where has that gone? We need to be very clear about the ideologies that seek to undermine us. That is Islam. That is communism. Not only can we not let them in, but we need to get them back out. And we also most certainly, George talking about this, we need to educate because we know the left is educating about Islam, and here's what they're saying. It's a religion of peace. Jihad is inner struggle. They want nothing but the best for everybody. So it's all a massive whitewashing. We're seeing this with every ideology that seeks to undermine us.

As far as preserving this country, Western civilization generally, it is all about education. Yes, where are the feminists? It's completely devastating. And as just a last note on being strong on the subject of America, Western civilization and Christianity together, how these are woven together. This was what Charlie Kirk understood. Charlie Kirk went into the schools, into the universities, the hotbeds of all that's awful, and spoke about this using Socratic method, using kindness, using information. And I think we need to individually, collectively take on that mantle, that ideological basis, because I contend that it was because he was so powerful that he had to be taken out. He was so powerful because that was the message. He wasn't only America first, he was Judeo-Christian first. He was a Christian man first. He noted this, and he knew that the only way to preserve Western civilization was through that. So he led. We have the benefit of having had him as an example. So I would say we need to go into the schools, we need to write, we need to inform, we need to speak up. Wherever people talk about DEI, we absolutely must combat it. E pluribus unum, not the other way around. We need to be confident of who we are as a civilization and not be cowed and not be conquered.

[01:23:15] Frank Gaffney: Well said, as always. Matt, you as I mentioned, are literally in the front lines, working this problem of trying to counteract the penetration of our society by Sharia and its subjugation by those who seek to conquer us. Any parting words about how, in particular, this piece of the threat, which I must say I think is especially compelling because it is so odious and it is so demonstrably horrific to those we, men particularly, are duty-bound to protect.

[01:24:04] Matthew Shea, Esq.: I would start with just five things. First, the churches need to be aflame. The pulpits need to be aflame again, talking about Islam being the Antichrist spirit, and communism for that matter also being the Antichrist spirit, being unashamed about preaching that from the pulpit, unashamed about preaching that especially during election time, and unashamed about preaching that to people who might be offended. I think that we have shut down the pulpits too often because we thought people were gonna be offended. Number two, churches need to become a place of refuge again for those in crisis. My question in the United Kingdom is what happened to the churches when all of those girls were seeking a place to land safely? And I'm not trying to be more high and mighty than they are, but I think for us in the United States it is a call to action in the church. Can we be a place of refuge again?

Number three, on the legal side, I would add one more thing to what Liz said. As an attorney myself, I think every judge that enforces a Sharia court order needs to be impeached, or who defers to a Sharia court, and that has actually happened in Texas. They referred to a Sharia court almost as if it was like a mediation or some sort of an arbitration. It's absolutely abhorrent. So that needs to happen as well. Number four, at the local level, the teams around the United States, and primarily coming out of the church, they need to be putting pressure on the local law enforcement office to enforce existing law. We already have laws on pedophilia. We already have laws on bigamy. We already have laws on abuse. They need to be enforced regardless of the political cost, and I would make that message extremely clear.

And I think number five as well, the groups that are funding this have been getting away with this for years. The banking systems are now set up in the United States to funnel the money to these organizations. If we're going to declare the Muslim Brotherhood a terrorist organization and the Council on American-Islamic Relations a terror organization, and if in the future we declare every unindicted co-conspirator in the Holy Land Foundation trial a terrorist organization, then we actually need to shut them down and shut their doors and shut off their funding. Without shutting off the funding, we are going to be continually combating a multi-billion dollar marketing campaign coming back against us. So practically speaking, shutting off their finances is gonna go a long way to us winning this battle. And I echo the comments of everybody else on here. I'm just honored to be here. Thank you all for your service and your sacrifice in this fight.

[01:26:50] Frank Gaffney: Well, and back at you, Matt. Thank you for yours. A concluding thought or two from me. This is history being made as we speak. It's often difficult if you're in the middle of it to understand that. But as we are celebrating an historic achievement two hundred and fifty years ago in the next week or so, we have to be mindful that the history that we are making now will determine whether there is an America remotely like the one we are privileged to live in, in five years, let alone two hundred and fifty.

History is being made before us by people who are diabolically clever in using what freedoms we offer people in this country. We guarantee to its citizens, but we offer to others, including people who have just arrived here, many of them increasingly from Sharia supremacist nations, and they are set. And I so appreciate George Rasley's work and that of Anni and others who are capturing the actual verbatim, often videos of Sharia supremacists in our country telling us exactly what they are going to do to us. Sonja could speak to this for days. Part of why they are doing that, part of why they are being more bold, more brazen, more aggressive, more confident, to use Karen's formulation, in their civilization, such as it is, is they believe they're winning. And they don't need to look much further than what has happened in the United Kingdom, of which arguably the single most egregious example is what we've been discussing here, the rape jihad. But it's not the only example, and it's not true exclusively of Britain.

We are here today to warn that this program, this agenda, is on the march in our country. We have come together under the banner of bansharia.com. It's a shorthand way of describing what will almost certainly have to be a multifaceted undertaking. And you've just heard from each of the remaining speakers their ideas as to what that will take. But it starts with a commitment to protect our country, to ensure that, yes, our girls, but our little boys as well, our older children, our young adults, and everybody else is alive to this danger and is summoned to do their part to protect our country against it.

[01:30:00] That is, in short, the mission of bansharia.com. These webinars are, I think, a really important contribution to the educational piece of this. I cannot adequately thank the extraordinary people who have participated in this particular program and the others, and will in the future ones. Laura Logan, Anni Cyrus, George Rasley, Gloria Puldu, Karen Siegemund, Sonja Dahlmans, Matt Shea, as well as Liz Yore, thank you for your time here, but also for all that you do the rest of the time in trying to raise the alarm and equip the rest of us to respond properly to it.

I pray that we will succeed in doing that because, again, history will determine whether our children will be beset by these horrors, or whether they will be free and safe and prosperous, as I know we all pray they will be. God bless you all. Thank you. Please help us get this important program around when it is posted at bansharia.com very shortly. God bless America and each of you as well. Over and out.
